

Local nonprofits join forces to reduce animal overpopulation
FACE Low-Cost Spay/Neuter Clinic and IndyFeral team up, launch capital campaign

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

April 6, 2012

INDIANAPOLIS-- FACE Low-Cost Spay/Neuter Clinic announced cat advocacy organization, IndyFeral, is now a program under the Clinic.

The merger will allow the two organizations to pool their resources, creating a first-of-its-kind clinic for spay/neuter of house, stray, and feral cats and dogs.

“Our missions are the same. FACE and IndyFeral are like-minded organizations committed to ending euthanasia through accessible and affordable spay/neuter,” says Ellen Robinson, Executive Director of the FACE Clinic. “It didn’t take long for us to see the opportunity that a merging would offer. Together we will be able to do more than either of us can do separately.”

Making IndyFeral a program of FACE allows IndyFeral to focus on their expertise of TNR, colony management and outreach, while FACE will oversee surgery and medical care of animals.

“Stray and feral cats are the greatest source of cat overpopulation. These cats produce 80% of the kittens that flood the shelters every spring and summer,” says Lisa Tudor, Executive Director of IndyFeral.

FACE and IndyFeral will soon be launching a capital campaign for the expansion of the clinic, to better meet spay/neuter and medical capacity demands needed.
